February 2024 - Post No.49

February is flying but I am not impressed that it does not seem to be getting any warmer... Miss Redman says this is the Spring Term but it doesn't feel very 'spring-like' it is too chilly, windy and soggy if you ask me! In response to this I have spent much of February snuggling my humans including in this snap, my lovely cousin Zach...

I must also say that it isn't all snuggles with Zach, I am also his biggest fan on the hockey pitch. This month I enjoyed the opportunity to go along and watch one of his school matches at Cranleigh School. Although I did anticipate that I would be Zach's team's lucky charm, sadly this was not the case on this occasion as they lost 3-1; my expert view was that they deserved to win but as Miss Redman says, 'some you win and some you lose...' we all had fun just the same so I guess it doesn't really matter!

In other news, this month I have been incredibly sociable. Not only did I catch up with my biological cousin Bentley during the half term break but I also had the pleasure of making a new friend called, Webster. Can you spot the difference? It is a little tricky to see but while Bentley is a short haired like me, Webster is a long-haired dachshund; either way, I happen to think we're all particularly handsome and I'm sure you'll agree?!

In school news, February has brought opportunities to attend the dazzling Westfields Has Talent Showcase, a couple of Class Assemblies and one of WIS's Parents Evenings amongst my day to day duties of course!

Before I sign off, I did just have to share this amazing work of art inspired by, you know who... me! Isn't it amazing? Miss Redman and I were so grateful to receive it and it now takes pride of place in Miss Redman's office on the wall.

I am excited to see what Marvellous March will bring—I wonder what springtime adventures we'll share?

Love,

Dexter
